Sprint Delivery Plan:

An organisation must adopt the Sprint delivery planning approach if it is to succeed in projects. When stakeholders and team members decide together what they need to finish and deliver before the following sprint review meeting, it outlines the roadmap for the following two to four weeks. Before a sprint begins, there is a meeting called a sprint planning session. This meeting is held by the team to decide on the sprint plan and establish a sprint objective. The members establish a sprint backlog and current sprint, as well as the amount of backlog items in the sprint. Each and every module is given to the team members so they may demonstrate their efforts and contributions to the project's development.
